If you have Macros on your keyboard that consist of keystrokes separated by colons, and you need to "re-group" or "re-assign" the macros after changing your keyboard, this software will automatically group the macros together for you, and also provide a facility to choose any of the macros that you wish to assign a specific keystroke. He may have been trying to find a way to get out of the deal, not in the least bit wanting to do any of the work involved in the deal, and not wanting to incur the risk and possible liability in taking on the deal. Maybe that's just a better fit for him than being in the middle of a project or in the middle of making a deal (or selling or financing one). Personally, I'd consider the deal and the requirements it imposes an onerous task. If you couldn't find a way to let the client go, then you're going to have to do something to support yourself. You could probably find another job that didn't require this much time and energy. I think your instincts are pretty good here. Just be sure to get some other people's thoughts and opinions before you sign on the dotted line. Thanks for the advice guys, it really helped. I thought about that for a minute, but in the end it just didn't feel right to me. It was a bit like giving up half a loaf to keep a quarter of a loaf.
